

Jessica A. Hockett @Wood_House76 · Apr 22
 The Possibility of a Poisoning Event in New York City 🦠🇺🇸

Dialogue with - and joint response to - Sasha Latypova

(with @jengleruk @MartinNeil9) 🔗📌

The possibility of a poisoning event in New York City

Dialogue with, and joint response to, Sasha Latypova

JESSICA HOCKETT, JONATHAN ENGLER, AND MARTIN NEIL
 APR 22, 2025

---

👍 1    💬    🔄 3    Share    ⋮

💬 6    🔄 4    ❤️ 7    📊 2.5K    📌    ⬆️

fringe dweller @mapperdan · Apr 23
 About that preparedness racket...

Here is an article co-authored by James Giordano on "the need for modernized, improved preparedness for—and response to—potential biothreat scenarios."

Responding to Future Pandemics:
 Biosecurity Implications and Defense Considerations

Diane DiEuliis and James Giordano
 ©2023 James Giordano

ABSTRACT: In an evolving and expanding biothreat landscape caused by emerging biotechnologies, increases in global infectious disease outbreaks, and geopolitical instability, the Department of Defense now faces challenges that alter its traditional approach to biothreats and prompt the need for modernized, improved preparedness for—and response to—potential biothreat scenarios. These challenges further complicate specific weaknesses revealed by the COVID-19 pandemic, including the Department's inability to sustain the military mission while meeting intragovernmental expectations to assist with civilian public health resources and services.

💬 1    🔄    ❤️ 2    📊 145    📌    ⬆️

fringe dweller @mapperdan · Apr 23
press.armywarcollege.edu/cgi/viewcontent...

💬 2    🔄    ❤️ 2    📊 115    📌    ⬆️

Prof Martin Neil @MartinNeil9 · Apr 24
 Replying to @mapperdan @Wood_House76 and @jengleruk
 Ta. Seems war scholarship doesn't require evidence based argument.

💬 2    🔄    ❤️ 2    📊 121    📌    ⬆️

fringe dweller @mapperdan · Apr 24
 The people in the biothreat industry go around entertaining each other with spellbinding stories of self-spreading killer agents, sharing the excitement of some day saving the world from devastation. It is make-believe but they are paid nicely to do it.

💬 1    🔄 4    ❤️ 6    📊 918    📌    ⬆️

Jessica A. Hockett @Wood_House76 · Apr 24

I'm asking as a rhetorical device only, as I do have answers, but yes. :)

Not only "needed" but there's such a thing as too many. You cannot afford to mess up and have too many - i.e., mess up your own op. You need "sure things".

That's a reason why these grander theories about certain poisons, drones, gas in the subway etc. are rather silly.

They build on a Hollywood version of what intelligence ops involve and are really just another version of "GoF is dangerous" but without the spreading coronavirus aspect.

As I've said to @DrGooglybean - and others - the real practice activities were mundane, not the stupid things going on at Ft Detrick or some lab in Ukraine.

Healthcare fragility/precipice theory/sink the damaged ships still applies, of course woodhouse76.com/p/the-allegory...

You need some "sudden deaths" of real people, including people at home. Can you get the NYC home death spike through more fentanyl and/or EMS withholding CPR "because spread"? Maybe.

But let's take it back to James "Greatest Showman-Salesman-Hypnotist" Giordano (who may, in fact, mesmerized by his own myth-making):

The idea of sentinels is correct, but it's not sentinel illness as triggered by poisons or clones or whatever.

It's sentinel STORIES. Sentinel SIGHTS and SOUNDS via SCREENS. #alliteration

Make people believe The Few - or the one - are The Many, despite what is true around you.

"reject the evidence of your eyes and ears" #1984

I daresay similar has occurred re the COVID shot.

See what I'm saying?

2 replies 6 likes 100 retweets

Leo Biddle @biddle_leo

Well said, I see something similar. Sentinel stories/sagas are best established through audience participation. Their authentic/emotional reaction and subsequent retelling gives a lie legs amidst the egregore. See Big Lie, covid or watching the towers fall amongst many others.

2:14 PM · Apr 24, 2025 · 76 Views

1 reply 5 likes

Post your reply

Reply

Jessica A. Hockett @Wood_House76 · Apr 26

"we are simultaneously the audience, actors, and titular victims of The Truman Show on steroids."

From woodhouse76.com

1 reply 2 likes 56 retweets